Q: Can I "git push" local changes to remote branches? I have a number of branches on a remote git repo. If I want to make a change to the master branch on the remote repo, I would do something like git checkout master git remote add sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git git commit -am 'blah' git push sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git master ...and then something similar if I want to make a change to the dev branch. Now, if I want to make a change to the master branch, but to a branch that's not the one I previously pushed to, I have to do git checkout master git push sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git dev ...and if I want to make a change to the master branch on the remote repo to a branch that's not previously pushed, I have to do git checkout master git push sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git dev ...which means that I have to do the push twice. I'd like to simply do git checkout master git push sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git dev ...which would push both master and the new dev branch to the remote. Is this possible? A: $ git push sftp://some.host.com/repos/test.git master With git
